Re: Docket #07-16

Dear Secretary Dortch,

The importance of the internet cannot be understated; it is used daily by most Americans in work or play. Using the internet at broadband speed maximizes the many benefits of going online. However, over one hundred million Americans do not currently use broadband. This number puts the U.S. 21st in the world for broadband access.

Many small businesses, such as mine, would greatly benefit from an affordable option for internet access. The M2Z proposal before the FCC can make this happen if it is approved. I would like to see more Americans have access to broadband, and by offering it free to everyone, many who cannot afford broadband will be able to join the online community. Small businesses will be able to utilize the internet to boost business which will certainly help our economy grow.

For so many, location and cost prevent them from receiving broadband internet. This can, and should, be changed. The country will benefit from having more access and better communication abilities. Please support the M2Z Networks proposal.
